

BANKING ON EXCELLENCE

CAMDEN Medical Centre congratulates Cordlife for its accreditation by the prestigious AABB, the international body that recognizes the highest standard in cord blood banking. Worth mentioning is the fact that this private cord blood bank is also the first such bank in Southeast Asia to achieve such recognition.

To qualify, Cordlife was rigorously audited. From their very first sample, they have been adhering very strictly to the AABB's high standards in everything they do. With the accreditation, that adherence has been formally recognized.

First such bank in Southeast Asia to achieve such recognition.

This accreditation means that Cordlife's medical, technical and administrative performance met the high standards set by the AABB. Extending even to non-lab functions such as sales and marketing, the certification again demonstrates Cordlife's commitment to providing outstanding service in all its dealings. For example, great emphasis was put on the veracity of the data and statistics used in their marketing materials.

Parents who want to bestow the promise of a new life to their children, can rest assure that they are banking with the best.

A quick and painless procedure, the stem cells are collected from the baby's umbilical cord at birth and are a rich source of haematopoietic cells. The benefits of storing your child's stem cells is that it can be used for future transplants and could possibly be the only treatment for up to 72 different diseases, including Leukemia and metabolic disorders.
